

HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE IS IN HANDS OF JURY

Dwight Suspect Not Murderer Clara Olson

SHERIFF OF WISCONSIN CO. SAYS SO

Autopsy on Body To Be Held Some Time Saturday

BULLETIN

Dwight, Ill., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Walter Christensen of Porter, Minn., grinned happily and a bit sheepishly today when it was definitely established he was not Erdman Olson, the Wisconsin youth wanted on the charge of having murdered his sweetheart, Clara Olson. Sheriff Harry Sherwood of Crawford County, Wis., arrived here late this morning and immediately said that Christensen was not the young man he seeks.

Christensen did not even closely resemble Olson, the sheriff said and Christensen, who had been held since Wednesday night, prepared to go back to his corn husking in this neighborhood.

Sheriff Sherwood conferred with District Attorney Earl at Prairie Du Chien over long distance telephone and decided not to go to Crawfordville, Ind., where another suspect is held.

Instead, Sherwood decided to return home and requested that a picture of the youth held at Crawfordville be forwarded to Chicago.

AUTOPSY POSTPONED

Prairie Du Chien, Wis., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The yellow clay caked about the body of Clara Olson, found dead yesterday in a shallow grave near the farm of her lover's parents, must keep for at least another day the secret of her death.

An inquest to have been held today was postponed by District Attorney Earl until a pathologist arrives Saturday.

RADIO CONTROL TO GET PLACE IN DISCUSSION

Congress Expected to Give Consideration to Present Chaos

Washington, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Congress expects to listen in on the radio this winter to programs coming in not only on the receiving set at home, but also to the broadcasting of a number of its members from the floors of the House and Senate.

In other words, radio legislation, which got sidetracked in the closing days of last session, is slated for another turn on the main track of the legislative program.

Two radio bills, one the White bill coming from the House and the other the Dill bill from the Senate, were so unlike each other that both houses appointed a group of members to confer on the matter and attempt to adjust differences. This group of conferees met and staid immediately issued forth. When Congress adjourned July 3, the two bills still were downed out in the confusion.

Both the White and Dill bills are designed to give the federal government broader control of radio activities, but proposed different methods of doing about it. Representative White, Republican, Maine, feels that his plan is best, while Senator Dill, Democrat, Washington, is convinced, when he suggests would be better. Whether radio legislation is enacted at the forthcoming session probably will depend largely upon the attitude of the authors of the two measures take.

The White bill proposes that the federal government exercise control over the ether through a bureau in the Commerce Department and also a radio commission to be created by Congress. The Dill measure would place sole power to regulate the ether in the hands of a commission. This latter measure also is prefaced by a declaration, as follows:

"That it is hereby declared and reaffirmed that the ether within the limits of the United States, its territories and possessions, is the inalienable possession of the people thereof, and that the authority to regulate its use in interstate and foreign commerce is conferred upon the Congress of the United States by the Federal Constitution."

DIXON NOVELTY CO. TAKEN OVER BY TWO LOCAL YOUTHS AND MOVED TO NEW PLACE

Kreitzer Bros. Have Assumed Management of Growing Firm

The Dixon Novelty Company which has enjoyed a prosperous growth in this city for several years and has been located in the Howell building on Galena avenue, has changed hands and locations. Richard and Leonard Kreitzer, two Dixon young men have purchased the enterprise and are now busily engaged in relocating the business on the second floor at 81 Galena avenue.

Leonard Kreitzer is managing the business and at this time of the year, the company is enjoying the most prosperous season since its establishment. Some idea of the extent of the company's operations may be gleaned from the fact that several large shipments have recently been made to Paris, France, of hand decorated glass novelties, which are sent out by one of the big automobile manufacturing concerns to its foreign dealers. Chain stores from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans and mail order houses are among the chief buyers from the Dixon concern.

The holiday season is the busiest of the year in the novelty business, and the local concern has enjoyed the biggest year of business in its history. Hand painted novelties in crystal, glassware, aluminum ware and wooden ware are the big sellers. Bread boards, meat carving boards, ash trays, candy jars, crumb trays, salt and pepper sets and toilet sets are the chief articles turned out of the studios, where women, expert in the handling of brushes, decorate each piece individually.

Is the new location, the novelty company has sufficient room for storage, offices and studios. Salesmen cover the entire country and the prospect for the two Dixon young men who have taken over this successful business, of which little has been heard locally, is a most successful one.

Thieves Cause Flood Damage in Freeport

Freeport—Thieves hunting for gold are believed to have been responsible for a broken water pipe in the office of Dr. F. M. Carl, dentist, that resulted in damage to the extent of $25,000, chiefly from flooding of a clothing house and confectionery on the floor below.

Farmer Robbed of His Crop Money at Tuscola

Wee Willie's very happy. He could almost dance a jig. He's gonna hang mom's stocking up. And say, it's twice as big.

"Open House" Last Night for Stores Was Big Success

Dixon merchants last evening entertained with an "open house" which was a huge success in many ways, according to reports gleaned from several of the stores today. Large crowds made their way through the many stores, viewing and admiring the fine stock of holiday goods and wares. The toy departments of the several stores attracted the "kiddies" with their parents and the plan in its initial trial proved a big success. Many out-of-town visitors took advantage of the good roads and weather conditions and visited Dixon's stores.

PLAINT, PROBLEM AND ULTIMATUM OF FARMER TOLD

Separate Groups Hear Discussions of Agriculture

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Middle western agriculture today had poured its plaints, problems, and ultimatum upon America through addresses made before a dozen conventions now in session here.

Two politico-agriculturalists, F. O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, and Smith W. Brookhart, senator-elect from Iowa, painted the farm picture in black. "The agrarian situation," said Lowden, "is in a bad way." The nation, in Brookhart's opinion, faces "the greatest farm crisis in history."

While these two, addressing separate groups, were urging recognition and remedy, another speaker, Mrs. T. P. Hollowell, republican committee woman from Brookhart's state, told the Illinois Republican Women's club, that the republican party will be repudiated in Iowa unless it "answers affirmatively the demand of the middle west for farm relief legislation."

Suggested Remedies

Two other speakers addressing committees of the American Bankers Association, offered remedies for farmers.

"Increased production, not increased prices, is the road to farmer relief," said Arthur Huntington, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

A better tariff system and a "general, long-time legislative development policy for agriculture" were suggested by Waford Lindstrom, Pleasant Lake, Ind.

Former Governor Lowden said there were remedies available "for a nation brave enough to try the experiment," but he did not go into details.

Senator-elect Brookhart said the present situation calls for "a complete cooperative credit system with cooperative reserve bank, all under control of the farmers and laboring people themselves."

At sessions of the International Corn Growers Association, the corn growers monopolized attention, with discussion centered on plans to have congress raise $10,000,000 to fight the worm.

Electric Bulbs Should be Used on Yule Trees

Use of electric lights instead of candles on Christmas trees was urged today by Fire Chief Coffey in the nation-wide movement to minimize holiday fatalities.

He urged parents and societies planning Christmas trees and holiday decorations to exercise special care in lighting systems. Electric lights are safer than candles, he said, and the same appeal was made to merchants and others arranging holiday displays. Arrangement of the electric lights by a qualified electrician was urged.

Cars Collided at Third and Crawford: One Hurt

Mrs. Arthur Carnes is confined to her bed suffering from injuries and nervous shock, the result of an automobile collision at the corner of Third street and Crawford avenue between a coupe, driven by her brother-in-law, O. Melner, in which she was riding, and a sedan driven by a Mrs. Layman of Amboy. The coupe was badly damaged and Mrs. Carnes' arm was badly bruised when she was thrown against the steering wheel.

UNIFORM CONTROL OF MILK NEED OF AMERICAN CITIES

Illinois Health Officers are Told by Dr. N. O. Gunderson

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Adoption of uniform control measures to assure Illinois cities an ample supply of clean safe milk, was recommended by Dr. N. O. Gunderson, health officer of Rockford, here today, in addressing the annual conference of Illinois Health Officers.

Dr. Gunderson recommended that the conference name a committee of three to start this undertaking. Functions of the committee, he said, would be to prepare a Milk Supply Appraisal form; to formulate a set of Uniform Control measures.

"Has the city milk supply been appraised? This question, Dr. Gunderson said, "is based on the supposition that a systematic milk program cannot be instituted by a City Health Department until the Health Officer knows exactly what his city's particular problem is. The problem may be factors prevailing at the farms, lack of a tuberculosis program, lack of equipment, or no laboratory facilities."

"So, it is reasonable and just that an inventory, survey, or systematic inspection be made of all firms dis-

PLAIN-CLOTHES OPERATORS TO WATCH FOR SHOPLIFTERS HERE DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON

During the holiday season each year, Dixon merchants suffer a considerable loss through shoplifting, and a plan has been worked out this year by which it is expected that this practice will be reduced to a minimum and shoplifters will be vigorously prosecuted. The plan goes into effect at once and will continue until the close of the holiday shopping period.

Merchants and the police department through Commissioner Charles E. Miller and Chief of Police J. D. Van Bibber, will have special operators working through the stores from the hour of opening in the morning until the close at night. These operators, it is announced, will not be stationed in any one store for any great period of time, but will work throughout the business section, visiting all stores and keeping a careful watch.

Stocks on show cases and tables in stores, especially arranged for the holiday shoppers, which have in the past been more or less easy prey for the shoplifters, will be under the careful scrutiny of these special operators in civilian garb. Members of the police department will not participate in the plan, it is announced, special operators, both men and women, being engaged in protecting stock from being pilaged.

tributing milk in the city to learn the source of the supply, the quality, health condition of the herds, methods of transportation, methods of cooling, health status of employees, and then after obtaining this data, instigate a fair, honest, nonpartisan method of scoring each plant or distributor according to definite accepted standards.

"The whole problem of milk control in the small as well as large cities appears to be one of getting together and working out a definite control system."

"At the present time there exists a great diversity of programs for the municipal control of milk supplies."

"This diversity is apparently due to a lack of knowledge as to what the particular local milk problem is; an improper correlation of the different phases of milk control; and a lack of sufficient funds for carrying on an effective program."

"One way of solving this problem of diversity is to formulate an appraisal form for determining the exact sanitary status of the milk supplies and adopting uniform control measures which will assure clean safe milk and be applicable to small as well as large cities."

Disease Tuberculosis

"Tuberculosis will be discussed at two sessions, the first devoted to 'Tuberculosis Control,' at which Dr. Robinson Bosworth, medical director of the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium of Rockford, and Dr. Lydia Hilmes, director of the McLean County Tuberculosis Sanitarium, of Normal, will speak. At the closing session of the two day meeting an assistant attorney general will explain the County Tuberculosis Law and Dr. E. D. Monroe, director of the Madison County Tuberculosis Sanitarium of Edwardsville will discuss the law.

Dr. Clarence T. Roome, former health officer at Evanston, will tell the method of developing a program of infant and pre-school hygiene, at which session, Dr. E. A. Edlen of Moline, will also discuss infant and pre-school hygiene.

A practical program of school dental hygiene will be outlined by Dr. C. Carroll Smith, school dentist of Peoria, who will be followed on the program by Dr. E. T. Gallagher, school dentist at Alton.

Dr. R. V. Brookaw, health officer of Springfield, and Dr. W. H. Newcomb, health officer of Jacksonville, will take part in the sessions.

DIVORCE ACTION BEFORE EDWARDS IS SENSATIONAL

Lee Center Couple in Legal Wrangle in Circuit Court

A suit for divorce filed by Mrs. Eva Cortright of Lee Center township, in which she charges her husband, Seamus E. Cortright with cruelty, is being threshed out in the circuit court before Judge Harry Edwards today. The defendant in the suit has filed a cross bill in which he alleges statutory charges. Attorney H. A. Brooks is appearing for the husband and Attorney William Kehoe of Amboy for Mrs. Cortright.

County Clerk Charles Lowry of Kane county was a witness this morning, in behalf of Cortright and told of having issued a marriage license in Geneva several weeks ago to Mrs. Cortright and a Lelloy E. Myers, now of Elgin and formerly of Amboy. Asked by Attorney Kehoe if he could identify the woman who accompanied Myers, the Kane county clerk pointed out Mrs. Cortright and testified that he was positive in his identification, recalling the fact that Mrs. Cortright on the occasion of applying for the marriage license, spelled her name when asked. The license, he testified, had not been returned to his office.

A large array of witnesses were present in the court room to testify and at 12 o'clock Judge Edwards recessed until 1:30.

Foreign "Touch" Making Revue Producing Show

New York.—(AP)—Musical revues, in which producers these days try to inject a certain amount of foreign atmosphere, are several years in the making, despite the efficiency of modern theatrical mechanics.

No longer are a few French words on the scenery sufficient to give the Parisian flavor to elaborate productions, say the Shuberts. So the producer visits foreign centers and even builds, designs and costumes some of the acts in foreign cities.

Parisian designers had a large part in costuming "Gay Paree of 1926" and workshops of Spain, Italy and England also are represented. Scenes sketched two years ago were costumes on the last trip of J. J. Shubert to Europe. Acts are now being designed for him which he will see on his next trip.

Refuses to Impound Evidence Against Moline Defendant

Rock Island, Dec. 3.—Andrew Lints of Moline, defendant in a liquor case, will be called to trial soon, it was announced by D. H. McNeal, assistant state's attorney, after Judge W. L. Leech of Dixon had overruled a motion to impound evidence in the case.

Joe Lavendowski, Cordova township farmer, who is charged with operation of a large still, was arrested late yesterday afternoon by Deputy F. O. Youngren of Moline and placed in the Rock Island county jail as his bond was increased from $2000 to $4000.

Lavendowski was found guilty in county court yesterday and sentenced to eighteen months on the state prison farm at Vandalla by Judge Leech.

Mysterious Fire Was Discovered Early Thursday Morn

A Nash truck belonging to Jacob Oliver of Franklin Grove, was completely destroyed by fire in the Hotchkiss garage in that city at an early hour yesterday morning and the building was only slightly damaged. There were also fifteen other cars in the garage, none of which suffered damage other than from smoke. Twenty gallons of gasoline in the tank of the truck was consumed in the blaze without more serious damage than the loss of the truck.

How the fire started is a mystery and what prevented the others cars from being destroyed adds to the mystery to the unusual fire. The truck was driven into the garage late Wednesday night to be stored and the garage locked up. The charred and smoldering ruins of the truck were discovered when the garage was opened for business yesterday morning. A window sill a short distance from where the truck burned was charred and all of the glass was broken. The metal ceiling which was installed in the garage last spring showed indications that the heat had been intense but the ceiling is credited with having prevented the spread of the blaze to the upper woodwork and the possible complete destruction of the building together with its valuable contents.

The origin of the fire is as big a mystery as the manner in which the structure was saved. The fact that there was no storage battery in the truck dispels the theory of a short circuit in the wiring. The drop cord which is used by the mechanics in making repairs on cars, was hanging on the wall in its proper place which makes it very difficult to attribute the mysterious fire to an electric spark.

Larabee Galloways Attract Attention

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(AP)—The most picturesque breeds of cattle at the International Livestock Exposition are the rough coated Galloways, who like their wild forefathers the buffalo, are select in number. Fewer are in existence than any other breed.

Other breeds have hundreds of owners in the entry list, but the Galloways number just two. For years there has been no opposition at the show to entries of Frank Brothers, Mount Cory, Ohio and J. W. Larabee, Earlville, Ill. Only 15 of the animals, which by the way, possess hides capable of making enviable fur coats, are entered for prizes.

SIX NEW NAMES ON ROLLS WHEN CONGRESS MEETS

Four of Newcomers to Make First Bow to Their Colleagues

Washington, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Six new names will appear on the roll of the Ninety-Ninth Congress when it convenes next Monday, while the seventh that of Harry B. Hawes of Missouri, will be called in the Senate instead of the House.

Of the newcomers, four take up their duties on Capitol Hill for the first time and two return after an absence of one session.

The four total strangers are: David W. Stewart, elected to the Senate for three months to fill the seat from Iowa left vacant through the death of Albert B. Cummins.

Harry L. Englebright and Albert E. Carter, who fill vacancies caused by death in the California House delegation.

John J. Corcoran who takes the place of Hawes in the Missouri House delegation.

Of the others, David I. Walsh, for many years a familiar figure in the Senate chamber, returns after a brief absence to take the seat of Senator M. Butler, while former Representative Frederick W. Dallinger takes the place of the late Harry I. Thayer of Massachusetts.

Mr. Hawes replaces George H. Williams as the junior Senator from Missouri.

The political lineup in both houses is changed by the filing of the vacancies. The Democrats gain two votes in the Senate by the addition of Walsh and Hawes who won in the last election the seats Butler and Williams were holding by virtue of appointments. On the other hand, the Republicans gain a vote in the House as Englebright, a Republican, captured the seat from California held by the late John E. Baker, a Democrat.

JUDGE TOLD JURORS OF THEIR DUTY

Motive Chief Issue in Their Deliberation, He Instructed

Somerville, N. J., Dec. 3.—(AP)—The Hall-Mills case was given to a Somerset county jury at 1:44 o'clock this afternoon.

Judge Parker began his charge at 1:07 p. m.

"Although the trial has lasted for about a month, the fundamental issues are simple," said Judge Parker, "as all the defendants have denied the act, your principal inquiry will relate to that issue."

"The state must prove without reasonable doubt that Mrs. Mills was murdered; that the murder was in Somerset county; that the defendants had a part in it." He said that one or more could be found guilty.

There is no question, Justice Parker said, "that Mrs. Mills was dead and that she had been murdered. Nor was there much doubt that the crime had been committed in this county."

"The evidence is both direct and circumstantial," he said. "The direct is controverted and so we think is much of the circumstantial."

Where proof of motive is not sufficient, the judge went on, "if you are unable to find a motive you will be entitled to consider that fact."

Must Decide Motive

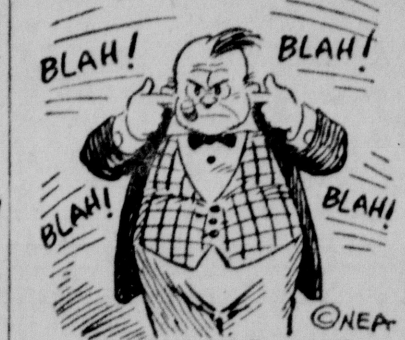

"On the motive phase, a great mass of evidence has been adduced and you should be able to decide," he said. "Has the state shown beyond reasonable doubt the fundamental issue. The defendants are all charged actually and must all have been present."

Presence must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, he said, reviewing the claims of each of the defendants of not being in De Russy's Lane. There is more or less testimony in support and denial, he said, but the state remains under the burden of proving them at the crime. The duty of the jury is to consider the evidence, he said.

Discussing the calling card he referred to Detective Totten, identifying it as the one found at the scene and outlined the state's contention of the history of the card.

"If the print is William Stevens' and if the card is genuine it is a fair inference that William Stevens handled it at the scene of the crime, although not conclusive."

5966.82 Miles of Pavement in State Completed

Illinois now has 5966.82 miles of completed hard roads in the state's highway system, according to reports from the state highway department.

In addition, there are 1947.22 miles of grading completed that will be paved next year, and 1759 bridges have been built.

Now under contract for paving in 1927 are 256.15 miles, as well as 39.33 miles of grading and 45 bridges.

In the six years, from January 1, 1921, to December 1, 1926 there has been 4760.95 miles of paving laid, 1246.83 miles of grading work completed and 1016 bridges constructed.

About 300 miles of paving remains to be completed under the $60,000,000 bond issue and when this has been finished, work on the $100,000,000 bond issue roads will be begun, although the state highway department has not officially announced the locations for the new routes.

on the card," he said, "and if you are not convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, then the value of the card is gone."

The justice referred to Mrs. Jane Gibson's testimony as the chief direct evidence. If her story was true, he charged, it would appear conclusive that the defendants were there, and in corroboration the state refers to cars resembling those owned by the defendants.

"You must assess the value of this testimony," he said, "is not a possible doubt, but that state which leaves an abiding conviction in the jurors mind that there may be innocence."

The charge emphasized that some of the evidence applied to only one of the defendants, some to two, and some to all, indicating that the case of each must be considered separately.

Francis Bergen, prosecutor of Somers county, began summing up the case for the state, Alexander Simpson, special deputy attorney general, who has conducted the case for the state, announcing that Bergen would speak first to "reply to the vituperation which had been contained in the address of counsel for the defense."

Simpson then began his summing up for the state's case. He termed it the "most trying of all trials" and told the jurors that the state would owe them a great debt—"that is, which ever of you gentlemen keep your oath and weigh the evidence, and do not kick the case out in twenty minutes."

Might Have Been Mule. Referring to statements of defense that James Mills, husband of the slain woman, or Mrs. Jane Gibson, the state's eye witness might have committed the crime, Simpson said he would prove that "Jennie," Mrs. Gibson's mule, might just as easily have been guilty.

Simpson told the jury that he was receiving no money for his part in the trial.

"Public conscience is going to decide this case, whatever you say, for it has got the evidence in the case, the prosecutor told the jury.

"The time to try this case was four years ago," said Simpson. "We come in here four years ago and all the thanks we get is Senator Case's statement that 'It's a nasty case.'"

Woman's Heart "Empty." He described Mrs. Mills as a woman with an "empty heart, who had a husband not particularly inspiring."

Mrs. Hall, he described as an elderly woman of wealthy position. Her husband, he said, was hers, and she would not tolerate Mrs. Mills' taking him from her.

He described the relations between the minister and the slain child singer as "this sitting on the lap, kissing, meeting and correspondence."

The prosecutor maintained that Mrs. Hall and her mother went to confront the Rev. Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills without any intention of committing murder, but that a quarrel resulted from Mrs. Hall's demand for an explanation of the letters, and in the ensuing struggle the couple were shot.

He then reviewed Mrs. Hall's account of her movements from the time her husband disappeared to the finding of the bodies, declaring Mrs. Hall on Friday "puts them together and kills them."

Criticized Mrs. Hall. "Take her own story, its absolutely irreconcilable with justice. They may escape human justice but not divine."

The prosecutor criticized Mrs. Hall for not having her husband's body brought home.

"When finally he is carried into the church for burial, he didn't even have honorary pall-bearers."

The special prosecutor spoke of Mrs. Hall retaining T. N. Pfeiffer, New York attorney, four years ago who Simpson said had brought Detective Peix Di Martin into the case to "shut up and testify witnesses."

"She doesn't care if the murderer is ever found," Simpson said.

"On the witness stand she said it wouldn't be decent to offer a reward. Four years ago, she said what was practically 'I'm not interested in finding the murderers.' She knew who they were."

Diary Entry "Cooked." He then pointed to what he said discrepancies in statements of Willie Stevens and began tracing the history of a calling card which the state contends was found near the bodies, bearing the print of Willie Stevens' index finger.

Henry Stevens' statement before the Middlesex County prosecutor in 1922 differed from his testimony on the witness stand, Simpson said. He charged that the blue fish entry in the

OLD MASTERS

The more we live, more brief appear our life's succeeding stages.
A day to childhood seems a year,
And years like passing ages.

The gladness current of our youth
Ere passion yet disorders,
Stays lingering like a river smooth
Along its grassy borders.

But as the careworn cheek grows wan,
And sorrow's shafts fly thicker,
Ye stars, that measure life to man,
Why seem your courses quicker?

When joys have lost their bloom and breath
And life itself is vapid,
Why, as we reach the falls of death,
Feel we its tide more rapid?

It may be strange—yet who would change
Time's course to slower speeding,
When one by one our friends have gone
And left our bosoms bleeding?

Heaven gives our years of fading strength
Indemnifying fleetness;
And those of youth, a seeming length,
Proportion'd to their sweetness.

—T. Campbell: The River of Life.

Buy Christmas seals and place them on the backs of each letter and parcel for Christmas. Buy seals and help some tubercular child to buy the milk it needs to build strong, healthy bodies.

The Lee County T. Tomorrow we will tell you how many Lee county patients are being cared for at sanitariums. The money for the seal sale, however, is used right here in Dixon for the relief of those ill with tuberculosis or those who are threatened with the disease. Buy the seals at Geisenheimer's, at Sterling's Confectionery or stop at Mrs. Joseph McClary's home and she will sell you some. Later, about the week before Christmas the seals may be purchased in the Postoffice lobby, for Uncle Sam sanctions this seal sale, which is nation wide.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY
BREAKFAST—California oranges, cereal, thin cream, cornbeef hash, corn bread, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Cauliflower in mushroom sauce, Boston brown bread, cranberry and prune pie, milk, tea.

DINNER—Salsbury steak, mashed potatoes, creamed onions, endive salad with French dressing, crackers and cheese, whole wheat rolls, jelly, canned peaches, coconut cake, milk, coffee.

While the juice of oranges must be served to babies and small children, adults and older children should be served whole oranges occasionally. California or naval oranges are delicious peeled and pulled into sections. The inner skin separating the sections is so thin that it need not be removed. In fact it's considered quite beneficial in that it adds bulk to the diet. If Florida oranges are used, cut them in half across the sections—like grape fruit—and serve with a spoon.

Cranberry and Prune Pie

Two cups cranberries, 1 cup prunes, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-4 teaspoon cinnamon.

Wash prunes well, cover with 1 cup cold water and let stand overnight. Simmer in the same water until stones can be removed, about twenty minutes. Remove stones and cut prunes in pieces. Cut cranberries in halves and add to prunes and juice. Simmer ten minutes and add sugar, flour and cinnamon, mixed and sifted. Turn into a pie dish lined with pastry, dot with bits of butter and cover with a top crust. Put into a hot oven for five minutes to "set" the crust, then reduce heat and bake twenty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

Mrs. Mark Keller was awarded the favor for high score at bridge and Mrs. Harry Fleming received the favor for second score.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock Mrs. Ahrens, Mrs. Miller and Miss Ahrens are again entertaining with a bridge tea, and tomorrow afternoon these three hostesses will entertain with a thimble party at the Ahrens home.

Recital at Mrs. Jos. Petersberger's

The guests in attendance at the recital given yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Joseph Petersberger, 209 Crawford avenue, were afforded a genuine treat, the program being given by Mrs. Lester Wilhelm, soloist, with Mrs. Lloyd Davies, at the piano.

The Petersberger home was gay with autumn flowers and foliage, a pretty setting for the enjoyable afternoon.

Mrs. Wilhelm, one of Dixon's most delightful singers, a mezzo soprano with a wide range and rich and melodic tones, possesses rare poise and happy personality, the combination making her singing a treat, indeed. Mrs. Davies is a most sympathetic accompanist, anticipating the singer's moods and playing with true musicianship at all times. The program was varied enough to please all, the encores being in the lighter vein. Each number was beautifully given, the fourth group perhaps being most brilliantly sung, the last number "At Parting," also calling for exceptional praise, while the number, "Quest," by Smith, a rather quaint bit, appealed to others. The famous aria from Samson et Delilah, always a favorite was nicely done. The entire program afforded great pleasure to all present, Mrs. Wilhelm being in excellent voice.

After the program during the serving of refreshments the guests indulged in pleasant discourse. Mrs. Sidney Elchler of Amboy was an out-of-town guest.

The program given is as follows:

I "Air de Salome" from Herodiade (Encores) "Just a Cottage Small by a Waterfall."

II "The Street Organ"..... Sibella

"Quest"..... MacFadyen

(Encores) "Duna"..... McGill

III "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice" from Samson et Delilah..... Saint Saens

INDUSTRIAL VALUE OF WOMEN STILL BELOW PAR—BUT WHY?

By Olive Roberts Barton

The school board of a large American city employed efficiency experts to figure out a way of reducing expenses in maintaining their school buildings.

The efficiency engineers went over the buildings with pad and pencil and issued their ultimatum. "Cleaning the buildings should be costing a hundred thousand dollars a year," they said.

The school board called the janitors up on the carpet. They did not say "Off with their heads." They said "Off with their help!" But they meant to be more definite, "Off with their male helpers."

Then to soften the blow, for everyone knows that the major-domo in charge of a large building cannot do all the window cleaning and ash-sifting himself, the school board said, "You may employ women, good sirs. You can get the same service with the help of charwomen; we shall raise your salaries, and we shall still save."

I wonder how many ages it will take to get the Chinese prejudice out of the masculine make-up, concerning the industrial value of women.

It must be that most of the women who will be employed are foreigners. Perhaps and perhaps not. It may be that the men who have been dismissed are mentally more capable. But in this case it must appear to be a case of labor and not of brains.

It is the old economic question of men earning more than women for the same work. Men have families. So have women. Most of the charwomen I have employed are supporters of families—in many cases of husbands also.

To pay by piece instead of time has been talked of as a solution. Pay for value received, be it from man or woman. Yet where it has been tried it is still difficult to maintain an equal scale.

I wonder how many ages it will take to get the Chinese prejudice out of the masculine make-up, concerning the industrial value of women.

Now then, what is the answer? One cannot say that the women will be paid less because they render less service. The work is there to be done, must be done, and will be done, and women will do it.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

COOK VEGETABLES WHOLE

Cook vegetables whole when possible; when not, cut into as large pieces as it is convenient. If the cooking water is to be served with the vegetable, the pieces may be smaller than would otherwise be desirable.

MOLASSES CAKES BURN

Cakes containing molasses burn easily. Bake such cakes in thick loaves that require long baking. Line the tins with greased paper.

THE WHY OF IT

If a cake is coarse grained, this is usually the result of too little beating or too slow an oven.

SPONGE CAKE

Never neglect the pan in which you are going to bake a sponge cake. Instead, line the pan with ungreased paper.

SALADS FOR WINTER

Do not neglect salads in the winter-time when you naturally serve heavier food. While the food value of a green salad is not large, the salts and vitamins it supplies are most necessary to the system.

Would Beautify Rights-of-Way With Flowers

Ames, Iowa—(AP)—A new use for land in the rights of way of railroad companies and that adjacent to public highways, has been found by Dr. L. H. Pammel, chairman of the Iowa board of conservation.

Dr. Pammel proposes to use this "waste" land as a pasturage for bees, by planting wild flowers in perpetuating types of flora native to the state. The plan has the triple purpose of conserving wild flora, augmenting the honey supply and making travel a delight because of the pleasant floral aspects of scent and color.

Trees also are in the project, including wild plum, red haw, Washington thorn, choke cherry and elderberry.

Among railroad companies which have come to the support of the secretariat in his plan are the Chicago & Northwestern and the Wabash.

Lord Dewar's Epigrams

Follow Wilde's Style

London—(AP)—Lord Dewar, whose wit has made him a popular after-dinner speaker, is creating many new epigrams after the Oscar Wilde style.

"I am delighted to see so many women present," he told one audience. "The road to success is filled with women pushing their husbands along."

"It's a wise wife who laughs at her husband's jokes," he continued. "The story may not be funny, but some husbands are."

"Heaven protects the working girl, but it is the girl who does not work who needs the most protection. Some lead a strenuous life dodging work."

THE WEIGHT OF CONGRESSMEN.

Speaker Nicholas Longworth insists there are no more dumb Doras—or, if you like, no more dumb Donalds—in Congress today than usual.

He recalls that the same history of the prowess of the Congresses of which Clay, Lincoln, Blaine, Tom Reed, Carlisle and Randall were mighty members also bears witness that at the time of their very might, the public commented on the weak caliber of its lawmakers generally.

The obvious corollary is that today's critics of our Congress who hark back to the good old days when Congresses were real Congresses, when men like Clay and Blaine and Reed wrote history in letters of fire, will be confronted in a decade or so by laurels flung at this Congress of 1926, and a moving plea made again for statesmen such as it boasts.

After all, what about this business of a uniformly heavy-weight Congress? Should the several score men who sit in that great congressional hall down there in Washington be each and everyone a "great mind"?

We as a nation are not uniformly heavyweights, mentally speaking. Is it altogether fair that the average man or woman with only an average group of things should be prescribed for exclusively by geniuses who "look beyond the ranges"?

The argument, of course, is that the really big man recognizes the common good and knows how to leaven his prescription for intellectual giants with the mead that stockier stuff enjoys. But do they?

Our very method of sending men to Congress intends largely that the men there be but mouthpieces of the constituency at home—dumb Donalds and Doras in fair portion, of course.

A dumb Donald in Congress speaks the language of many citizens, and mirrors their thoughts, their desires.

Though the mental laugh at him, maybe more or less of him is a good thing.

MAINE WENT, ETC.

Maine had the first word and the last word in elections this year. The last word was more important than the first.

The Pine Tree state holds a state election in September, and although it nearly always goes republican, we have come to look upon the returns as indications of what may happen in the rest of the country in November. The size of the pluralities gives us our clew.

The motto of Maine is Dirigo, meaning, "I direct." In connection with the popular conception of the early Maine elections, the motto is not out of order.

This year we have seen a new importance attached to a Maine election. After September and November canvasses were over, the state was called upon to elect a United States senator to fill the vacancy left by death of Senator Fernald. We had in hand the results of the November election throughout the country, and were aware that only by the election of a republican to succeed Fernald would the republicans have a clear majority of 1 over the democrats in the senate. That goes to the point of organizing that body and naming the committees, as there are several senators who seem to prefer voting with the democrats when their own committee places are not at stake.

So, while we have a habit of saying that as Maine goes, so goes the nation, whether it so goes or not, it was a fact that as Maine went in the last election, so goes the senate.

Arthur R. Gould, republican, was elected by a substantial majority over Fulton J. Redman, democrat. The eleventh hour of the campaign developed some heated controversies and flying charges. Governor Brewster threw his weight against the candidate of his own party. He charged that there had been excessive campaign expenditures. That seems to be the bogey in this season and everybody is using it. The attack on Gould seemed to have had no damaging effect.

"If Mr. Magill and his friends are building a campaign for civic righteousness they will have to have a better foundation than the one built on lying and false allegations," says the Rev. M. P. Boynton, one of the best known ministers in Chicago, who is also executive secretary of the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois.

The glory is not to the party or persons who bring about reduction of taxes by legislation. It is to the man who makes it possible by reduction of the cost of administration of the government.

Do you remember when the jolly storekeeper used to glue a dime to the top of the showcase?

One man sues another because the other's bees attacked his gold fish. Not the first case where a fish has been stung.

Aimee may be right and the devil may be the biggest liar but we've seen some formidable runners-up.

Houdini left his books to the Congressional library. Perhaps the congressmen can find in them some way to pass farm relief.

THE TINYMITES

BY HAL COCHRAN

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The Tynmites at dawn arose and quickly jumped into their clothes. How very neat the garments looked, all epic and span and white. They'd hung upon a long clothes line, which made them hold their shape real fine. It surely was a happy bunch to leave them up all night.

Said Scouty, "Now that we are dressed, let's run along. I think it best that we all leave this place before somebody comes along. Of course we've had a good time here, but we are in the wrong, I fear, for after all is said and done, 'tis not where we belong."

So out they ran by twos and fours and when they reached the great outdoors they surely were surprised to see the farmer in the yard. They hid before he saw them, too, and Scouty said, "What shall we do? If he should ever find us he will make it mighty hard."

"Run to the barn," someone replied. "We'll have to sneak around side, and when we reach the place we'll get some apples and some eggs." They made the short trip very fast and when the danger zone was passed, they stopped beside an apple tree to rest their weary legs.

And then they gathered apples red, while Scouty very smartly said, "We'll get some bags out of the barn and fill them to the top. Then, when we have a heavy load we'll strike out for a country road and keep on walking 'till we reach another place to stop."

They found the bags and dragged them out, and filled them full with a farmyard with a little trace of sorrow. What fun they'd had upon the farm, and none of them had come to harm. And soon we'll see what's going to happen to them all tomorrow.

SAINT and SINNER

To Faith it seemed that that gay rehearsal of the wedding, within St. Peter's beautiful, austere, echoing emminence, on the even of Cherry's wedding day, was as binding as an actual ceremony could be.

It was bitterly cold outside, and since there were no services at St. Peter's that day, the church was like a vast, ice vault. Frances Warren and Selma Pruitt, who had sweetly acknowledged Cherry's rather impudent but sincere notes of apology for the scene he had created in their presence, were bundled in fur coats.

"You're going to have a fur coat for Christmas," Bob, there in the capacity of usher, along with Bill Warren and George Pruitt, whispered to Faith as she withdrew from the center of the clamorous group after the rehearsal.

"Isn't it heartbreaking to see how proud Mr. Cluny looks?" Faith countered, though the sudden sweep of color into her pale cheeks had answered him mutely. "He tries to walk so—so jauntily, as if he were trying to prove he isn't really old—just in his prime. I'm afraid that strenuous trip to Europe is going to be too much for him. Cherry will want to do everything and see everything, from riding in a Venetian gondola to climbing the Alps, and he looks as if a sudden gust of this November wind would carry him away. Oh, Bob, I hope she'll be kind to him! It's breaking my heart to see him so proud and happy and so determined to be the gay young dog."

"Let's run away and have an hour to ourselves," Bob's fingers closed tightly around her arm, ardently, possessively. "I'm starving for you, darling. Cherry has kept you so frantically busy that I haven't had a real kiss for days."

"I'll have to tell her I'm going," Faith whispered.

When she edged quietly into the clamorous group about Cherry and the elderly bridegroom, she heard her sister saying, in a high, nervous, excited voice:

"Yes, I'm all packed. Every last one of my seven trunks was checked today, right to New York. Ralph did it himself, the darling. Her golden eyes were lifted fleetingly but with something like shy tenderness to the silver-haired old man who bent so possessively, so yearningly over her. "Two blessed, thrilling weeks in New York, and then—Europe! I'm so excited I can't sleep. All of you come over to the house now. Faith has made enough Thanksgiving pies for a dozen families, and Ralph has given Mother a case of the most marvelous sherry. Good for her, you know, but she won't be piggy about it."

"I think you ought to go right home and go to bed, darling," Faith tugged gently at the sleeve of the pink coat. "Bob and I are going for a little drive. I'll be home in an hour, to give you a bromide if you aren't already sleeping."

"I don't want to sleep!" Cherry laughed shrilly. "I can get plenty of sleep when I'm a settled old married woman, but this last night—the very last night when I'll be Miss Cherry Lane, I want to dance all night. Come on, boys and girls! I've been learning to do the 'Black Bottom' and I can Charleston any one of you under the table."

A quick flush splashed the thin, waxen cheeks of the old man she was going to marry. Faith, her heart throbbing with pity, saw his hand tremble on Cherry's shoulder.

"You'll do no such thing, Cherry Lane," Faith laughed. "Mother's all worn out with excitement as it is, and I'm not going to let her be kept awake all night by jazz music and dancing. Mr. Cluny, you'll take her right home, won't you, and give her strict orders to go to bed? You must begin to assert your authority over her. I've found her a handful myself."

The gayety was wiped instantly from Cherry's vivid, lovely little face. "Oh, all right, Faith bosses me to death," she waived plaintively. "You'll be nicer to me than Faith is, won't you?"

Ralph Cluny put an arm stiffly about Cherry's shoulders, and Faith was horribly embarrassed to see the quick tears of age film his pale gray eyes. "I'll be good to you, my dear child. I'll do everything in the world to make you happy."

When the wedding party had dispersed, Cherry obediently allowing herself to be escorted home alone by her bridegroom, Faith found that her heart was too heavy for the rest either of words or tears. Bob Hathaway, driving his new sedan swiftly and almost silently through the wind-swept streets, now lightly powdered with the first snow of the season, understood and mercifully remained as silent as she.

"It is going to be not later than Christmas, isn't it, darling?" he asked after a long while, and Faith knew what he meant.

"I must go to Cherry now," she parried his question with a long kiss. "Poor Cherry! I wish—But it's too late to wish now."

TO COMMEMORATE ANNIVERSARY OF N. W. TERRITORY

Cahokia Plans Exposition in 1928 to Celebrate History

Cahokia, Ill., —(AP)—The historic Old Northwestern Territory will live again here when the Northwest Territory sesqui-centennial exhibition will be held in 1928. Plans are now under way for the sesqui-centennial, following the organization of the Northwest Territory Commission of 100 residents of Cahokia, direct descendants of the early French settlers, and the preparation of incorporation papers by State Representative Thomas L. Fekete, of East St. Louis.

Under three flags, the Fleur de Lis of France, the Union Jack of Great Britain, and the Stars and Stripes of the United States, the destiny of the Territory has been formed for more than two hundred years. The states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin now comprise what was then an unbroken wilderness, inhabited by savages, wild beasts and a few traveling missionaries and traders.

France There First
France was there first and stamped her policy and personality so firmly on the region that they were continually cropping out to harass the later American advance. Government under the French and English regimes was mainly paternal and military but within a very short time after General George Rodgers Clark had won the country northwest of the Ohio, the State of Virginia, on the basis of its claim to that region, passed an act establishing the "County of Illinois," for the purpose of providing a temporary form of government and affording necessary protection to the inhabitants.

On December 2, 1778, Patrick Henry, who was then governor of Virginia, appointed Colonel John Todd as County Lieutenant. Col. Todd came to Kaskaskia in the spring of 1779 and set up his government but difficulties arose and he left the country in the fall of 1779 and 1780. Virginia had been forced to withdraw its support of the Northwest Territory because of difficulties at home and the necessity for some sort of government for the unorganized western country had become very urgent.

First Governor Chosen
Government for the territory was contained in the Ordinance of 1787, passed July 13 of that year and on October 5 General Arthur St. Clair was elected the first governor. General St. Clair had been president of the Congress of the Confederation at the time the Ordinance was passed.

Congress desired to admit Ohio to the Union as soon as possible so in May, 1800 an act of Congress sliced away that state, and all that part lying west of a line beginning at the Ohio opposite the mouth of the Kentucky River and running thence to the Canadian border was called Indi-

ELKS AID WORK FOR WELFARE OF BOYS OF TODAY

Grand Exalted Ruler Tells of Work at Boys' Conference

Chicago, Dec. 2.—(AP)—A plea for a general realization and intelligent consideration of the boy problem, was made before the International Boys' Work Conference here by Charles Grakelow, Grand Exalted Ruler of the B. P. O. E.

"Manhood tomorrow is the boy of today and we of today must properly equip him to be efficient," said Mr. Grakelow. "Twenty-five years in welfare work, most intensively in the last three years as Director of Public Welfare in Philadelphia, have convinced me that the Order of Elks is sensing the situation by advocating, launching and maintaining playgrounds and recreation centers. We remove the youngster of today from the dangers and temptations that go with congestion of humanity and bring him under the influence of intelligent instructors, consuming surplus pep and energy by turning them into body and spirit building activities and teaching him a due regard for the rights of others and the proper care of ones body. All these things combine to send the youngster to bed each night tired, but clean and healthful by reason of spending his spare time in the playgrounds.

"Better knowledge of this country, her institutions and her possibilities and the lives of many of her great men, who, like themselves, came to these shores to see and to conquer, facilitates the assimilation of the foreign-born parents.

"This conference will have accomplished much if, through those now in attendance, you emphasize to every community here represented the self-evident truth that the taxpayer must pay the bills and that there are two sides to even this question. It is for him to decide whether he prefers to pay in the support of recreation centers and playgrounds, which yield a wonderful return on the investment in the shape of worthwhile citizenship, or whether he would rather ignore his responsibilities to the next generation, permit a portion of them to get off on the wrong foot and then pay the bill by supporting hospitals for diseased bodies, and penal and correctional institutions. The returns on this investment are discouraging and valueless.

"We have full confidence that our American boy today is just as wholesome and the possessor of just as great possibilities as he was at any time in America's history. This will be proved to the degree that we, the adults, help him to reach maturity untarnished and healthy."

FLOWERS TO GET BIGGER SUM IF HE LOSES FIGHT

Unusual Arrangement is Effected for Fight This Evening

Chicago, Dec. 3.—(AP)—The middle weight boxing crown is at stake tonight in a ten round match to a decision between Tiger Flowers, Georgian deacon, who is champion of the 160 pounders; and Mickey Walker, former welter weight champion.

Flowers will win a larger purse if he loses than if he is victor. If Flowers' speed and boxing skill give him the victory on points he will receive half the estimated gate receipts of $50,000 less the boxing commission's ten percent. If he loses by a knockout or a decision open to question, he will receive instead a $65,000 purse put up to cover such a contingency by Jack Kearns, Walker's manager. In addition Flowers will get first call for a return match with Walker to try to recapture the laurels which have been his since the deacon de-throned Harry Greb last February.

Guard Against Decision
Flowers' manager, Walk Miller, effected this protective arrangement with Kearns because, he said, there had been talk that Rocky Kansas was stripped of his lightweight title here last spring by a poor decision of a referee.

The contest has attracted the largest ticket sale since Illinois legalized boxing last spring, exceeding the gate at the Mandell-Kansas match which was held outdoors in the rain, by $15,000.

The most recent bouts of both boxers have gone far to encourage backers. Flowers won over Sailor Eddie Huffman, Pacific coast middleweight hero three weeks ago and Walker stopped the local southpaw favorite, Shuffle Callahan, in a decisive fashion a few weeks ago.

Semi-finals will bring together George Godfrey, negro heavyweight, one of Jack Dempsey's sparring partners, and Cowboy Billy Owens, Dallas, Texas, in eight rounds.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Axle Grease to Clothe Swimmers in Wrigley Offer

Los Angeles, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Black axle grease threatens to eliminate standard bathing suits in the $25,000 marathon swim from Santa Catalina Island to the California mainland, scheduled January 15 next.

Announcement by Mrs. Charlotte Moore Shoemmel, New York, that she would use black axle grease and as little cloth attire as possible, has revealed that many swimmers expecting to compete have similar plans.

Oscar Reichow, a member of the committee in charge of the marathon sponsored by William Wrigley, Jr., said contestants may wear any non-floating suit they desire or not suit at all.

A Los Angeles women's club and a ministerial association will call upon Wrigley to protest as soon as the baseball and chic magazine arrives on the Pacific coast.

A score of women and 200 men have entered the channel swim, Reichow announced. Entries will close January 5.

Swimmers claim that grease not only would counteract cold currents but might also serve to keep sharks away. Sharks, it was said, avoid dark bodies.

Thinks Coaches of Universities Have Hardest of Berths

New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Could college professors stand the criticism and close scrutiny that is given the work of major football coaches and still hold their jobs? Dr. Leo Gallowsy, president of the alumni federation of New York University doesn't think so.

Discussing the benefits of football to undergraduates life last night Dr. Gallowsy said that the gridiron sport had the advantage over classical instruction because of better teaching and closer contact with environment.

"How many teachers of the classics would vote to stand the same tests for holding their jobs as Meehan, Stagg and every other coach in America today?" he said. "There are few teachers like one at New York University who dismissed his class a few weeks ago with the injunction that since he could not hold their attention, he wished them to spend the remainder of the recitation period watching the football squad perform under Chick Meehan—and see what a real teacher could do."

Minor Leagues Want to Help Pay Landis' Salary

Asheville, N. C., Dec. 3.—(AP)—Minor league baseball, having taken up a large part of Judge Landis' time since he was appointed to supervise baseball in 1919, now wants to pay part of his salary.

The annual meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, which convenes here next week, will find the minor leagues' offer before it as soon as it meets. Heretofore the majors have paid all of the judge's salary although the minors have called on him to untangle difficulties on numerous occasions.

'HUDDLE' SYSTEM UNDER ATTACKS OF TWO COACHES

Many Changes Desired in Football Rules as Season Ends

New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Few football campaigns have closed under a sharper attack on rules governing modern formations than the campaign of 1926.

To the growing list of complaints against the shift, effectiveness of which already has been chained by the Western Conference, the point after touchdown and the incomplete forward pass penalty, now has been added criticism of the huddle system.

Two outstanding opponents of the group method of signalling are Bill Ingram, coach of the Navy eleven, and Lou Little, Georgetown mentor. The former believes that it throttles the personality and generalship of quarterback and is useless unless used to embody quick shifts.

Little describes the huddle as a "draw back to the game" contending that it shows up the contest.

College Football Drew $30,000,000 at Gates

New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—College football receipts during the past season are estimated at $30,000,000 from an attendance of 15,000,000.

Interest in all major sports to a point never before reached brought about baseball's third successive million dollar world series. Boxing gave its first $2,000,000 show at the Dempsey-Tunney battle. Football staged a million dollar spectacle for the first time in the Army and Navy drama before 110,000 people in Chicago.

Maloney One of Many Contenders for Crown

New York, Dec. 3.—(AP)—Jimmy Maloney today perched with Jack Sharkey, a fellow Bostonian, on the "logical contender" rung of the heavyweight championship ladder.

Maloney won a ten round victory over Franz Diener, Germany, at Madison Square Garden last night in another of Tex Rickard's elimination tournaments to determine a challenger for Tunney's title. Sharkey previously had jumped to the fore by a technical knockout over Harry Wills.

Moselle Mithra Cult Lived in Roman Days?

Threves, Rhineland.—(AP)—A shrine to the Persian god of light, Mithra, has been discovered at the foot of the Mountain of the Holy Cross near Threves by the Archaeological Commission of the Rhineland.

This discovery would appear to confirm the hypothesis that the Mithra cult was in vogue in the valley of the Moselle and throughout the Rhine country during the Roman occupation.

The excavated shrine contained a collapsed altar of Jurassic limestone with the Phrygian cap and the dagger which were the insignia of the god.

Italian Scientist was First With Chemical 61

Urbana, Ill.—(AP)—The new chemical element 61, named Ilinium, discovered by three University of Illinois instructors last spring, was found two years ago by Dr. Luigi Rolla of the Chemical Institute of Florence, Italy, but he failed to announce it then.

Dr. Rolla's discovery was accepted by the Congress of Scientists which met at Bologna, Italy. He named his discovery Florentium in honor of his city, while Prof. B. Smith Hopkins of the University of Illinois named his discovery Ilinium in honor of the university and the state.

Dr. Rolla now has agreed to relinquish all claims to its original discovery. Dr. Hopkins and Dr. Rolla met at a convention of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry at Washington University recently and reached an agreement on the original claim. The two scientists had worked independently, each unaware of the other's investigations.

Neutrowound Radio

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

The Great Distance-Getter

From Coast to Coast, Neutrowound is known as Radio's great performer—for distance, volume, tone quality and "B" battery economy.

Entirely Different—Vastly Superior

Neutrowound is entirely different from the average, over-simplified radio, with its limited performance. It is designed differently and tunes differently—and it is just this difference that makes Neutrowound vastly superior.

A low plate voltage for low waves; a high plate voltage for high waves—that's what does the trick—and Neutrowound gives it to you.

How To Get Distance

You get the greatest distance by tuning just below oscillation—but this point varies with the wave-length, requiring a different plate voltage for each wave-length—low voltage for low waves; high voltage for high waves.

Neutrowound's plate voltage control, the Neutrostat, enables you to vary the voltage to suit the wave length—the only practical way to tune the greatest distance, with clearest reception, at every point on the dial.

"B" Batteries Last Longer

"B" Batteries last three to five times longer with Neutrowound, many sets having been in operation a year with the same batteries. This is a saving you can't afford to overlook.

$95.00

Buy a NEUTROWOUND six-tube, super-power set, and you couldn't buy more radio if you spent a thousand dollars.

Come and Tune NEUTROWOUND

See for yourself what a superior radio it is—how it brings in the distant stations, clearly and with wonderful volume. Buy the right radio the first time. Try Neutrowound before you buy.

Three things every woman should know about COFFEE

1 Coffee in the cup can be only as good as it was in the bean. You cannot improve its flavor. To serve the best you must buy the best.

2 Coffee must be evenly ground and "purified" of uneven particles. Most coffees are ground as shown in upper circle. Little pieces brew too much and get bitter—big pieces do not brew enough and are wasteful. H&K Coffee (lower circle) is ground even and "purified." Each piece practically the same size. Result, perfect flavor and no waste.

H&K COFFEE
of course

You'll like it, too!

Good Thoughts for Good People

Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might, he increaseth strength.

Isaiah.

Give us this day our daily bread, we pray.
And give us, likewise, Lord, our daily thought,
That our poor souls may strengthen as they ought,
And starve not on the husks of yesterday.

Phillips Brooks.

Rest is not quitting the busy career,
Rest is but fitting oneself to one's sphere.

Goths.

Thou hast made us for Thyself, and the heart never resteth till it findeth rest in Thee.

St. Augustine.

Absence of occupation is not rest.
Cower.

That rest is sweet which comes through divine understanding. Although as yet this may be experienced in small degree, it inspires mortals with confidence that God's way of rest is the only way of obtaining true refreshment. God is infinitely compassionate. As mortals seek rest increasingly in Him, their human experiences become more divine, for they are tending toward that absolute perpetual rest which is inseparable from man, since God is always with him.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

Copyright 1926 Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"DON'T TELL THE WIFE," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. pictorialization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mis-mates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny, however, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Grattman, looking proof that Joan is faithless he plans to trap her and Abner while they are all on a week-end cruise on the yacht of Stivner, a millionaire lumber king, whom Ranny cultivates for business reasons. Complications multiply. Clare, a widow, camps Ranny. Stivner, loving Clare, resents Ranny's interest. Loyal to her marriage vows up to now, Joan feels Ranny's first release her. But he, finding of Clare, is ready to spring his trap.

The smoking room of the Speedwell, though essentially masculine in tone, was no less beautiful than any other part of that most magnificent of yachts.
In an open fireplace at one end of the room a log burned. The mantel was wrought out of the oak rib of antique sailing ship, and upon it rested a meticulously pieced model, hand carved by Captain Marty, of the clipper his father used to command in the China trade during Maine's maritime heyday.

The walls of the room were richly paneled in walnut, with tiny sconce lamps in the form of ship's lanterns set on each plaster. The ceiling was deeply beamed, also in walnut. The whole interior was highly polished to a mirror-like finish that reflected the dancing log flames through the miniature fog diffused from the cigars of the smokers, who were half buried in the comfortable furniture, which was sumptuously upholstered in warm-toned leather.

By and large it was an ideal place to lounge, in fair weather as well as foul.
Ranny and Clay, however, were not in the mood for lounging. They had work to do—grim work.

As soon as they could do so without attracting undue attention they slipped out of the smoking room.
The Speedwell was so arranged that most of the living rooms and the owner's apartment were one deck below the bridge superstructure—half a deck down, to be exact, from the lounge and main promenade—while the guest staterooms ranged along the forward three-quarters of the deck below. Aft of these were the crew quarters, and in the hold, still lower, were the engine room, the bunkers and the other necessary though unlovely portions of a great sea-going private yacht.

Ranny and Clay were thus able to make their way down to the Forbes' suite without running upon the deck, where they might have encountered Abner and Joan. They did not want to see that precious cad and his misguided consort—just yet!

After assuring themselves that Joan and Abner were not in the suite, nor spooning upon the private sundeck, Clay locked the sitting room door to the passageway while Ranny hastily fetched from his cabin a small package.

This the plotters untied, their expressions an odd mixture of cruel-severity and skylarking. Opened, it revealed a bicycle bell attached to a length of electric lamp cord, some miscellaneous non-insulated wires and springs and a small biscuit box.

Like field generals planning a battle, Clay and Ranny surveyed the suite. Specifically, it consisted of a sitting room, off which opened two separate staterooms and the private sundeck. These added to the main door opening to the corridor and the two doors opening into closets, made six apertures in the wall space besides the double window. The wall scheme, however, was so cunningly devised that there seemed to be only three doors—those to the closets and the hall. The other openings were really inset panels, which slid miraculously open at the slightest touch and fitted prettily into the decorative aspect of the room.

This, indeed, was charming, with furniture of beechwood, Louis XVI in atmosphere, walls in putty grey and the curtains and upholstery of rose-crimson silk. The private staterooms were alike in character, but different in tone. Ranny's in tan and rose English chintz, Joan's with apricot and sea-green damask draperies. In each cabin was a single berth, high set over a bank of drawers, and a built-in dresser and mirror, and each had a compact though luxurious bathroom. Joan's cabin was on the outside, her porthole opening on the sundeck.

"Now," decided Ranny, "the two closets are the key. With escape cut off to either the sundeck or through the corridor, he'll have to hide. He won't dare go into Joan's room nor into mine. There are no beds to crawl under! He'll have to duck into one of the closets. We can't wire both, so I'll lock one and take the key. That'll limit him to the one we shall trap."

Without further ado Ranny locked one of the closets.
Then, while Clay stood guard at the corridor door to listen for foot-steps, Ranny worked at top speed to set the "rat trap," as he called it, more grimly than facetiously. The bicycle bell and its improvised attachments, prepared before he left home, he concealed on a high shelf, fastening it by a small adjustable spring to the door and running the wire out under the carpet to a baseboard plug.

At length he finished and explained with a grin to Clay, who had watched the proceedings with interest.

"I'll leave the door a bit ajar. When Abner dodges into the closet his instinct will be to close the door after him, of course. Then—the bell will ring incessantly! Fini l'amour!"

The two arch plotters stood in the center of the room, relishing the prospect.
"Now," said Clay, "there's only one thing we haven't thought of." "What's that?"

"Well, after all, this is Stivner's yacht. He's entitled to know what we're up to, for he could thwart our plan to punish Abner if he's so minded. Besides, taking him into your confidence will serve to ingratiate you into his friendship and make up what you've lost in his estimation by your dampfoolery with that blonde."

Ranny agreed, and presently Stivner was seated in the Forbes' suite listening with amazement to the unvarnished tale. It was a pathetic confession, coming clean-breasted from a two-fisted fighting man. In Ranny's straightforward manliness Stivner, who knew how hard the telling was, found much to renew his admiration. There remained but one suspicion:

"For an abused husband you've been rather—er—flirtatious."

Ranny's frankness never faltered. "Only as a means to an end. Mrs. Clemonsau means nothing to me, I swear!"

"Forbes, I believe in you and I'm going to help you. Any man who steals another's wife—or woman—deserves to be punished. What's your plan for punishing Grattman?"

After Ranny explained Stivner found himself sharing the conspirators' glee. "That's rich! Only—we'll have to take Captain Marty into the scheme because it invades his sphere of authority."

Stivner summoned the captain. The matter was reviewed for the doctory seadog's benefit. Then Ranny explained.

"As a fitting humiliation, I propose to isolate Grattman in a dory to be towed behind the yacht until we get back to port on Monday, shutting him off meanwhile like the moral leper he is from the other guests and from all food except these crackers!"

"You needn't have brought that box of crackers," Captain Marty rumbled. "We've plenty of hard-tack!"

"Yes, but not this special kind!" "What's that?"

"DOG BISCUITS!"

CHAPTER XI
The nocturnal quietude of the sleeping yacht, an hour after midnight, was rudely disturbed by a man's angry yells and the persistent ringing of a bell.

Aroused guests, scantily clad, crowded after Stivner to the Forbes' suite. There they found a strange tableau:
Clay and the captain framed in the sundeck door; Joan, white-faced and trembling, in the center of the room staring affrightedly at the closed closet, within which a bell clanged madly. Ranny, the perfect picture of a cheated husband, glowering over her.

"What does this mean?" demanded Stivner as per his rehearsed part.

"It means that a home wrecker has been caught," thundered Ranny. He strode dramatically to the closet. "Come out, you—"

He threw open the closet door.

Out there stepped a smiling, happy vision of blonde delectability in shell pink pajamas—Mrs. Clare Clemonsau!

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

To the home of PROF and MOL- LIE ELWELL, in Camdensville, Ind., one night in October of 1898, comes MARTHA DALTON, a nurse, bearing with her a woman who had fainted on the train on which Martha had been traveling.

Elwell is an artist. He has a son, JIM, aged 5. Late that night twin girls are born to the woman, who dies without revealing her identity. Her attire had indicated she was a person of refinement and wealth.

The story then moves forward to June, 1916, and in Prof Elwell's workshop the reader is introduced to Jim Elwell, now 22 and his father's partner, and to the twin girls, who have been adopted by the Elwells. They are now 17 and one of them has been named MARGARET and nicknamed RUSTY; the other, ELIZABETH, is called BETTY.

To Jim the girls are just pals, although they are growing to beautiful womanhood. A stranger pauses by the Elwell back fence one day while the girls are washing their hair and addresses smart cracks at them. Jim, who takes up their battle, is given a beating and a black eye and the enemy is dispersed by a croquet ball thrown by one of the twins.

The twins and Jim, after eating supper with Nurse Dalton, enter the Elwell living room where explanations are due.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

JIM's mother looked up at him and a quick alarm leaped into her eyes. What on earth—

"Oh, nothing much," he told her carelessly. "Somebody got hit with a croquet ball, that's all. Such things can happen, you know. Betty is now going to make me forget my suffering for a while by singing 'The End of a Perfect Day'."

The day, Prof observed, would seem to have been imperfect, judging from the appearance of the eye.

"Who got hit by a croquet ball?" asked Mollie. "Jim, tell me—"

Jim grinned. "Not me. Ask the ball player over there." He nodded toward Rusty.

His mother's lips moved with another question, but Prof, with a touch of his hand, silenced her. His eyes were smiling.

"All right, let me have the music," he said. "It's all right, Mollie."

Jim grinned, glad to be rid of explanations. No one yet had ever explained a black eye satisfactorily.

A few moments later the musical twang of a softly touched harp came out of the settling shadows of early twilight from the parlor and brought Prof and Mollie into the room.

Jim lay stretched out on his left side on a sofa, his head resting on a pile of soft pillows. Rusty was camped on an ottoman on the floor close to the door. Her head was in a cloud of rust-colored hair, now shining dark in the deepening gloom, rested against Jim's chest under his chin. His right hand lay across her throat. Betty with her harp sat in a rocker drawn up as close to the sofa as possible.

Prof Elwell took in the scene and a faint smile flitted across his lips. "Looks as if he was suffering intensely, doesn't he?" he whispered to Jim's mother as they sat down. Mollie Elwell smiled a puzzled smile.

And then a sweet contrived voice, a voice that with early cultivation might have been magnificent, was lifted in a song that is known the world over: "Oh, Promise Me."

They were all very still as the sweet sound filled the room. Then, as the last notes died away, Prof Elwell leaned over and laid his hand with soft pressure on that of his wife.

"I want to talk to you tonight, Mollie," he whispered, "about something that is beginning to worry me considerably." The quick answering pressure he felt told him that another, too, was beginning to worry about something.

Jim Elwell was in the woodshed wiping his face the following Saturday afternoon when the twins came tearing in on him in their usual impetuous rush.

"Listen, you chickens," he told them, "quit tearin' around and tell me what you say to a scout after dinner down the river to Fenton's Woods? I'll take my twenty-two gat along. I got a couple boxes of cart ridges on the way home. If we run into a bear or a farmer's calf I'll let Betty shoot it. We probably won't run into any prizefighters today. If we do, I'll sic Rusty on him!"

Jim's proposal was a popular one and it brought forth considerably more than halfhearted response. Two joyous squeals rent the air and four pretty arms bare to the elbows were flung around the big painter's neck from behind. A knee pressed suddenly against the base of his spine and a lusty pull brought him down to the floor flat on his back.

"Just for that you're going to get a double-barreled kiss, Jimmy darling!" panted Betty, and suiting the action to her promise she flopped down on her knees and cupped a pair of red lips, fragrant and moist as a dew-kissed rose, over the mouth of Jim Elwell. He made a pretense of struggling but the next instant the operation was being repeated by the other twin. He made a wry face.

"There, that's what you get for being such a good guesser," breathed Rusty as she and her sister let their victim up. "We already had it planned to do that very thing this afternoon!" Jim Elwell touched his mouth gingerly with two front fingers. Biting and kicking and jumping on a man's back were barred in the wrestling game, he chanted with slow deliberation. "Ain't I got you two any tighter trained than to pull a stunt like that?"

There had been no biting and nobody had kicked him, protested Betty, her eyes glowing, and Rusty added darkly, "You better be good or you'll get some more."

The voice of Prof Elwell floated across the yard from the kitchen doorway. "Well, that's what I call tough lines, Jim. Gettin' thrown down an' most scandalously kissed by the two prettiest girls in Indiana!" Somebody, he added, ought to hang crepe on Jim as the finest living example of hard luck in its most wretched form.

"He's had it coming to him for a week, Prof, but you don't know why!" declared Betty with a guileless candor that Prof, looking into her shining eyes, felt carried nothing save the bubbling overflow of youth's effervescent spirits. He smiled, but again the question came to him, how could such a thing be and want Jim due for an awful jolt some day when he woke up?

"Well, Mollie says for you kids to get busy and get into the house for dinner," he announced as he turned and started back toward the dining room.

"If you had seen what I just saw you'd be guessing harder than ever," he said a moment later to the woman who had given him the best that life can give to a man for more than twenty-three years.

Rusty and Betty, decked out for summer comfort and with silk scarves wound around their heads to keep their glorious hair from flying, climbed into the side extension of Jim's scout car, an extension built for two small bodies. Jim dropped his straw hat at their feet and swung a leg over the saddle. Then he tinkered with a mysterious contraption that brought forth a mighty roar and the scout car began to scoot. They were on their way.

"Step on it!" advised Betty from her precarious perch at his side. He was not, he told her, in need of any gratuitous advice, but when he had stopped the machine at the path into Fenton's Woods and looked at his watch, he announced that they had been "going some." They had covered the twelve miles in twenty minutes flat.

He backed the car into the shrubbery. The trees in their green dress of summer, the profusion of cool ferns growing all around, the cool shade and somber hush in which the woods lay wrapped were deliciously inviting on that hot afternoon in June.

"Hist!" came the warning from Betty, just a step ahead, as she sighted a pond. She stopped short and held up the finger of caution. "Didja hear that bullfrog's croak?"

Three pairs of eyes roved the rim of the small body of water, its glassy surface flecked here and there with a greenish alga.

"There he is!" Betty whispered an instant later, in great excitement. "On that log over there, Jim! Let me shoot him, Jim. You said you'd let me shoot sump'n—a calf or a bear, if we ran into one."

"But that was neither calf nor bear," reminded Jim. "It's a bull. Do you think you're qualified to handle the bull?" He was reaching for his gun.

Betty cocked the small weapon and aimed it at the frog on the log. Then she turned her head half around, shut her eyes tight and pulled the trigger. The frog still sat on his log, the pond unruffled by a ripple.

Betty shot like a Chinaman, was Jim's comment as he took back the pistol. "Who ever heard of shooting your gat up against the mark and then shutting your eyes and pulling the trigger?"

"I think I came pretty close to the frog, just the same."

Jim turned to the other twin. "Here, Rusty," he said, putting the pistol butt in her hand, "you take a shot at him. Knock him off that log and I'll buy you both a new pair of silk stockings for the Fourth of July."

Rusty took the pistol in both hands and stepped forward two slow paces. She pointed it somewhere in the general direction of the frog. Then, just as she pulled the trigger, the muzzle lifted to an upland of some 45 degrees.

ILLINOIS-LAKES CANAL PREDICTED OVER CENTURY AGO

Writer in New York American Foresaw the New Water Route

Peoria, Ill.—(AP)—Almost a hundred years ago a sagacious traveler down the Illinois river, predicted that a canal connecting Lake Michigan and the Illinois river "would be to this Union what a cut through the isthmus of Darien would be to the world."

Columns of the New York American, of June 6, 1854, carried the communication from a traveler who signed himself "H", in whose identity Congressman W. E. Hull of Peoria is interested. "This 'H', Mr. Hull said, presented as forceful an argument for the Deep Waterway back in that far off time, as could be made in this day."

"Let the merchants of New York step in and make it," the communication said regarding the canal, "and the warehouses of Buffalo will be to St. Louis what those of New Orleans are at present."

Predicted Big Trade.
"New York will have the whole trade of the Mississippi Valley, and the vast regions of the Missouri will be tributary to her market. A canal boat that can navigate the lakes may then clear at Genesee ship and discharge her cargo at a trading post on the Yellow Stone. Such a canal would be to this Union what a cut through the isthmus of Darien would be to the world. The one would draw St. Louis as near to New York as the other would India to Europe. It would be well indeed that Government should make it but the means required are so slight in comparison with those invested in a hundred similar works in different parts of the level with Lake Michigan; thence seven miles and a half to the summit level, which is 17 feet above the surface of Lake Michigan, and five feet above the Deplaine; thence for a ship canal, down the Valley of the Deplaine and Illinois, about 90 miles, with 175 feet descent to the mouth of the Little Vermilion, four miles below the rapids of the Illinois river, at which point that stream is navigable for steamboats at all seasons."

Cigar Holding Popular Favor Among Germans
Berlin—(AP)—The ever-prevalent cigar is one of the most striking sights in the streets and cafes of Berlin and other German cities. Cigarettes are plentiful, and their use is increasing, but the cigar is still the popular smoke. The pipe is seldom seen in public places, and then usually in the mouths of visitors.

Cigar stores abound in which a "smoke" of sorts can be bought for as little as 2 1/2 cents. For the equivalent of a nickel a good-sized one of fair quality is obtainable. It is difficult to pay more than a dime for the best German-made cigar.
